12 MERITS REVIEW OF PROTECTION VISA DECISIONS

INTRODUCTION

In most instances where an application for a protection visa is refused or a protection visa cancelled by a delegate of the Minister for Home Affairs, the applicant is entitled to a merits review of that decision. Depending on the basis of the decision and immigration status of the applicant, merits review of protection visa decisions is either undertaken by the Administrative Appeals Tribunal (AAT) in its Migration and Refugee Division (MRD) or less frequently in its General Division, or by the Immigration Assessment Authority (IAA), an independent office within the AAT. ¹

This Chapter sets out the jurisdiction of the AAT and the IAA to review decisions about protections visas, in terms of whether decisions are of a kind that is reviewable. In the AAT context, it also briefly discusses whether a person has standing to apply for review, but does not deal with other requirements for establishing jurisdiction, such as matters relating to forms, fees and time limits to apply to the AAT for review. ² It also outlines some special provisions governing reviews in the MRD, but it is otherwise beyond the scope of this Guide to discuss merits review procedure in the AAT and IAA.

¹ Previously, merits review of protection visa decisions was also conducted by the former Refugee Review Tribunal (RRT). However, from 1 July 2015, by operation of the Tribunals Amalgamation Act 2015, the RRT became part of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal. The kinds of decisions formerly reviewable by the RRT are now reviewable in the Migration and Refugee Division (MRD) of the AAT.

² See s.412(1) of the Migration Act 1958 (the Act).
THE AAT'S JURISDICTION

Which decisions can be reviewed?

The Migration Act 1958 (the Act) gives the AAT the power to review a range of decisions about protection visas, including a decision to refuse to grant, a decision to cancel, or a decision not to revoke a decision to cancel a protection visa.\(^3\)

The AAT can review a decision to refuse to grant a protection visa except where:

- it is a ‘Part-7 reviewable decision’ (see discussion below under ‘Which Division are they reviewed in?’) and the person was not in Australia’s migration zone at the time of the decision;\(^4\)
- it is a ‘fast track decision’ (these are normally reviewed by the IAA);\(^5\)
- it was made by the Minister personally under section 501 of the Act;\(^6\)
- it relied on subsection 36(1B) of the Act (concerning a national security risk);\(^7\) or
- the Minister has issued a certificate preventing review.\(^8\)

The AAT can review a decision to cancel a protection visa except where:

- it is a ‘Part-7 reviewable decision’ and the person was not in Australia’s migration zone at the time of the decision;\(^9\)
- it was made by the Minister personally;\(^10\)
- it was based on a national security risk;\(^11\)
- the Minister has issued a certificate preventing review;\(^12\) or
- the decision is a mandatory cancellation under section 501(3A) of the Act.\(^13\)

---

\(^3\) See generally s.411(1)(c) and (d), s.414 and s.500(1)(b), (ba) and (c) of the Act, subject to the more specific restrictions described below. The AAT can also review certain pre-1994 decisions finding an applicant not to be a refugee, but these are unlikely to arise in current cases: s.411(1)(a) and (b).

\(^4\) Section 411(2)(a) of the Act.

\(^5\) Section 411(2) of the Act. See the discussion below about the IAA’s jurisdiction for more information about ‘fast track decisions’. Decisions made on certain character and security grounds (relying on s.5H(2), s.36(1C) or s.36(2C)(a) or (b)) are not ‘fast track decisions’ as defined in s.5(1) and are reviewable by the AAT: s.500(1)(c).

\(^6\) Section 500(1)(b) of the Act provides that only decisions by delegates of the Minister under s.501 are reviewable.

\(^7\) Section 500(4A)(a) of the Act.

\(^8\) Section 500(4A)(a) of the Act. Section 501(2)(b) of the Act prevents the review of a decision subject to a ‘conclusive certificate’ issued under s.411(3). Section 500(1)(c) similarly prevents the review of a decision subject to an ‘excluded person’ certificate under s.502 (for decisions relying on s.5H(2), s.36(1C) or s.36(2C)(a) or (b)). Both kinds of certificates can only be issued in the national interest.

\(^9\) Section 411(2)(a) of the Act.

\(^10\) Section 411(2)(aa) of the Act. Section 500(1)(b) also provides that only decisions by delegates of the Minister under s.501 are reviewable.

\(^11\) As assessed by the Australian Security Intelligence Organisation: s.500(4A)(b).

\(^12\) Section 411(2)(b) of the Act.

\(^13\) Section 500(4A)(c) of the Act. Section 501(3A) provides that the Minister must cancel a visa if the person doesn’t meet character requirements on the basis of a substantial criminal record or sexual offences involving children. A person whose visa is cancelled under this subsection can apply to have the cancellation decision revoked under section 501CA.
The AAT can review a decision not to revoke the mandatory cancellation of a protection visa except where it was made by the Minister personally.\(^{14}\)

Who can apply for review?

For a decision to refuse or cancel a protection visa, only the non-citizen who is the subject of the primary decision can apply for review, and they must be physically present in Australia’s migration zone when they apply.\(^{15}\)

For a decision not to revoke the mandatory cancellation of a protection visa, an application for review may be made by or on behalf of any person whose interests are affected by the decision.\(^{16}\)

Which Division are they reviewed in?

Most protection-visa related decisions the AAT reviews are ‘Part-7 reviewable decisions’ as defined in s.411 of the Act. These decisions must be reviewed in the MRD.\(^{17}\)

The remaining protection-visa related decisions the AAT can review could loosely be described as decisions made on security or character grounds. These decisions are not reviewable under Part 7 of the Act and are instead reviewed in the AAT’s General Division.\(^{18}\)

Specifically, they are decisions to refuse or cancel a protection visa under s.501 or relying on s.5H(2), s.36(1C) or s.36(2C), and decisions made under s.501CA(4) not to revoke a decision to cancel a protection visa under s.501(3A).\(^{19}\)

Limitations on scope of MRD review

If a protection visa refusal decision is being reviewed in the MRD because the primary decision did not rely on ss.5H(2), 36(1C) or 36(2C), the AAT is not able to make any

---

\(^{14}\) Section 500(1)(ba) of the Act provides that only decisions by delegates of the Minister under s.501CA(4) are reviewable.

\(^{15}\) Section 412(2) and (3) of the Act for ‘Part-7 reviewable decisions’. These limitations also apply to visa refusal and cancellation decisions referred to in s.500(1)(b) and (c) (which would otherwise be governed by the standing provisions in s.27 of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal Act 1975 (AAT Act): s.500(3)).

\(^{16}\) Section 409 of the Act.

\(^{17}\) Section 27, AAT Act.

\(^{18}\) These decisions are not Part-7 reviewable decisions as defined in s.411(1)(c) and (d) of the Act, are excluded from Part 7 review by s.500(4)(b) and (c). Section 500(1)(c) expressly provides for review of decisions to refuse a protection visa relying on s.36(1C) or (2C), but there is no similar provision for reviews of decisions to cancel a protection visa relying on these provisions and it is unclear whether such decisions are reviewable by the AAT, but this may not matter as there does not appear to be any power in the Act to cancel a protection visa relying on these provisions. The AAT Act provides that the Tribunal’s powers in a proceeding are to be exercised in the Division prescribed for such a proceeding or in the Division that the President of the AAT directs: s.17B(1)(a) of the AAT Act. No Divisions are prescribed for these proceedings but the AAT President’s Direction Allocation of Business to Divisions of the AAT (with effect from 12 October 2017) specifies any application in relation to a Part 5-reviewable decision or a Part 7-reviewable decision within the meaning of the Migration Act is to be allocated to the Migration and Refugee Division.

\(^{19}\) See sections 411(1), 500(1) and 500(4) of the Act. Sections 5H(2), 36(1C) and 36(2C) apply to applicants who have committed certain serious crimes or who are a danger to Australia’s security and are discussed in Chapter 7 of this Guide. For visa applications made before 16 December 2014, the legislation referred to Articles 1F, 32, 33(2) of the Refugees Convention but for applications made on or after that date, the references are to the codified statutory equivalents: see Migration and Maritime Powers Legislation Amendment (Resolving the Asylum Legacy Caseload) Act 2014 (No.135 of 2014).
determination on those provisions. The AAT’s power to remit the visa application to the primary decision maker for reconsideration is limited by the directions permitted by the Migration Regulations 1994, and those regulations effectively prevent the MRD from making directions in relation to the kinds of matters described in s.5H(2), s.36(2C) or s.36(1C).\(^{20}\)

While this limits only the MRD’s powers to make directions, the reasoning of the Full Federal Court in Daher v MIEA makes clear that the AAT cannot adjudicate upon those provisions in its MRD.\(^{21}\) Therefore, if an applicant otherwise meets the refugee definition or complementary protection criteria, but the material before the AAT raises an issue going to s.5H(2), s.36(1C) or s.36(2C), the AAT cannot determine that issue.

However, the AAT could still affirm the decision on the basis that the applicant does not satisfy one of the other criteria for the visa, or remit the application with a direction that the applicant satisfies other aspects of the refugee or complementary protection criteria apart from that issue.\(^{22}\) If the visa is later refused again at primary level on the basis of that issue, the applicant may be able to have that later decision reviewed in the General Division.

THE IAA’S JURISDICTION – ‘FAST-TRACK’ DECISIONS

Decisions to refuse protection visas processed under ‘fast track’ arrangements are subject to review by the IAA. The IAA is an office established within the MRD of the AAT.\(^{23}\) It has jurisdiction to review a ‘fast track reviewable decision’, which is essentially a decision to refuse a protection visa to a fast track review applicant, other than a decision made on the basis of section 5H(2), 36(1B), 36(1C), 36(2C) or 501.\(^{24}\) A fast track review applicant means a fast track applicant who is not ‘excluded’.\(^{25}\)

A ‘fast track applicant’ is an unauthorised maritime arrival who entered Australia on or after 13 August 2012 and before 1 January 2014, who has not been taken to a regional \(^{20}\) Section 415(2)(c) of the Act and r.4.33(3)(b), (4)(b) and (4)(c) of the Migration Regulations 1994. For visa applications before 16 December 2014, the references in r.4.33(3)(b) were to Article 1F, 32 or 33(2) of the Refugees Convention: see r.4.33(3)(b) as in force prior to the Migration Amendment (Resolving the Asylum Legacy Caseload) Regulation 2015 (SLI 2015, No.48). The longer descriptions in r.4.33(4), which concern permissible directions relating to the complementary protection criterion in s.36(2)(aa), appear directed to the provisions in s.36(2C) that prevent an applicant from meeting s.36(2)(aa).

\(^{21}\) Daher v MIEA (1997) 77 FCR 107; r.4.33(3)(b) and r.4.33(4)(b) and (c). Although the Court in Daher was considering only Article 1F, its reasoning extends to the Tribunal’s power to consider these other provisions.

\(^{22}\) See the directions available under r.4.33(3)(a), (3)(aa), (4)(a) and (5).

\(^{23}\) See generally Part 7AA of the Act which establishes the IAA. Part 7AA was inserted by Part 1 of Schedule 4 to the Migration and Maritime Powers Legislation Amendment (Resolving the Asylum Legacy Caseload) Act 2014 (No.135 of 2014), with effect from 18 April 2015: Migration and Maritime Powers Legislation Amendment (Resolving the Asylum Legacy Caseload) Commencement Proclamation dated 16 April 2015 (FRLI F2015L00543). It was then amended by the Tribunals Amalgamation Act 2015, continuing the existence of the IAA within the MRD of the AAT: Schedule 2, Part 3, item 187.

\(^{24}\) Section 473CC of the Act requires the IAA to review a ‘fast track reviewable decision’ referred to it. Paragraph (a) of the definition of ‘fast track reviewable decision’ in s.473BB of the Act refers to a ‘fast track decision’ in relation to a ‘fast track review applicant’. A ‘fast track decision’ is defined as a decision to refuse a visa to a ‘fast track applicant’ except decisions made on the basis of section 5H(2), 36(1B), 36(1C), 36(2C) or 501: s.5(1) of the Act.

\(^{25}\) ‘Fast track review applicant’ is defined in s.5(1) of the Act. An ‘excluded fast track applicant’, defined in s.5(1), broadly includes a person who was subject to the statutory bar in ss.91C or 91N, or has previously made an unsuccessful claim for refugee status in Australia or another country, or has presented a bogus document without reasonable explanation, or has made a claim that the Minister considers manifestly unfounded. Review may be available for an excluded fast track applicant in accordance with a determination made by the Minister in a legislative instrument: s.473BC and paragraph (b) of the definition of ‘fast track reviewable decision’ in s.473BB of the Act.
processing country, in respect of whom the Minister has waived the s.46A bar, and who has made a valid application for a protection visa. The Act also allows for the specification by legislative instrument of other persons or classes of persons as fast track applicants.

The IAA cannot review a decision if the Minister has issued a conclusive certificate.

A fast track applicant who is refused a protection visa does not need to apply to the IAA for a review, instead the decision is referred to the IAA.

Decisions in respect of fast track applicants are not reviewable in the MRD of the AAT. However, a decision that is made on the basis of section 5H(2), 36(1C), 36(2C) or 501 of the Migration Act is reviewable in the AAT’s General Division, even if the applicant is an excluded fast track applicant.

The IAA conducts a limited form of merits review. Subject to limited exceptions, the IAA must determine the review only on the material that was available to the primary decision-maker.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR REVIEWS IN THE MIGRATION AND REFUGEE DIVISION

There are some special statutory provisions governing the conduct of reviews in the MRD which concern the effect of earlier reviews, an applicant’s obligations to make their case, and dealing with new claims and evidence. The Tribunal is also required to comply with certain directions made by the Minister. These requirements are discussed below.

Effect of earlier review

Where the AAT (or former RRT) has conducted a review of a Part 7-reviewable decision and an applicant makes a further application for review of a Part 7-reviewable decision, the Tribunal need not consider any information considered in the earlier application, and may have regard to, and take to be correct, a decision made about or because of that information. However, this is subject to the Tribunal’s obligation to review an application

---

26 Section 5(1) of the Act. The term ‘unauthorised maritime arrival’ is explained in Chapter 1 of this Guide.

27 Paragraph (b) of the definition of ‘fast track applicant’ in s.5(1) and s.5(1AA)(b). At the time of writing, five such instruments were in force: IMMI 16/010 (F2016L00377) from 24 March 2016; IMMI 16/008 (F2016L00456) from 1 April 2016; IMMI 16/049 (F2016L00679) from 7 May 2016; IMMI 17/015 (F2017L01042) from 17 August 2017; and IMMI 18/019 (F2018L00572) from 31 May 2018.

28 If such a certificate is issued under 473BD of the Act, the decision is not a ‘fast track reviewable decision’ as defined in s.473BB.

29 Section 473CA of the Act.

30 Section 411(2)(c) of the Act.

31 See ss.473D-473DF and 473DB of the Act.

33 See ss.473D-473DF and 473DB of the Act.

---

November 2018
before it, such that it must not regard itself as constrained by the decision of the earlier Tribunal or prevented from considering all evidence and submissions before it.

Obligations on an applicant in making their case

The Migration Act places certain obligations on protection visa applicants in presenting their case. Section 5AAA clarifies that it is the responsibility of an applicant to specify all particulars of his or her claim to be a person in respect of whom Australia has protection obligations and to provide sufficient evidence to establish the claim. The Minister (or the Tribunal on review) does not have any responsibility or obligation to specify or assist in specifying any particulars of the claim, or to establish or assist in establishing the claim. This is consistent with the well-settled proposition that it is for the applicant to make his or her own case.

Dealing with new claims and evidence

Applicants are expected to present their case in full before the primary decision-maker, and not to wait until after the primary decision has been made. Section 423A, which applies with respect to protection visa applications made on or after 14 April 2015, requires the Tribunal to draw an adverse inference as to the credibility of an applicant’s claim or evidence where an applicant raises a claim or presents evidence that was not put forward before the primary decision was made. In such cases, if the Tribunal is satisfied that the applicant does not have a reasonable explanation as to why the claim was not raised or evidence not presented before the primary decision, s.423A of the Act requires the Tribunal to draw an inference unfavourable to the credibility of the claim or evidence. This effectively requires applicants to present all claims and evidence to the primary decision maker, unless they have a reasonable explanation for not doing so.

---

34 SZKOX v MIBP [2015] FCCA 789 (Judge Manousaridis, 26 March 2015) at [19], [21], where the Court found that it was reasonably open to the Tribunal to accept as correct an earlier Tribunal’s findings on certain claims in circumstances where it showed it had an open mind to the question by giving the applicant notice that it regarded the first Tribunal’s findings as evidence and offering the applicant an opportunity to make submissions about that, rather than simply adopting the first Tribunal’s findings without considering the claims before it. The judgment was upheld on appeal: SZKOX v MIBP [2015] FCA 990 (Reeves J, 9 September 2015). See also AOM15 v MIBP [2015] FCCA 2064 (Judge Street, 31 July 2015) (upheld on appeal in AOM15 v MIBP [2015] FCA 1285 (Perram J, 23 November 2015); SZVEY v MIBP [2015] FCCA 2239 (Judge Cameron, 4 February 2015).

35 Section 5AAA of the Act, inserted by item 1 of Schedule 1 to the Migration Amendment (Protection and Other Measures) Act 2015 with effect from 14 April 2015.

37 Section 423A of the Act was inserted by item 14 of Schedule 1 to the Migration Amendment (Protection and Other Measures) Act 2015 and, by operation of item 15(4) to that Schedule, applies to protection visa applications made on or after 14 April 2015. As currently worded, s.423A refers to ‘RRT-reviewable’ decisions rather than decisions reviewable under Part 7. This appears to be a drafting oversight, but may limit the application of the provision in respect of matters before the Migration and Refugee Division.
Ministerial Directions

Section 499(1) of the Act allows the Minister to give written directions to a person or body having functions or powers under the Act if the directions are about the performance of those functions or exercise of those powers. ‘Ministerial Direction No.56 – Consideration of Protection Visa applications’ requires decision-makers, including the Tribunal, to take account of the Department of Home Affairs’ ‘PAM3: Refugee and humanitarian – Complementary Protection Guidelines’ and ‘PAM3: Refugee and humanitarian – Refugee Law Guidelines’ to the extent that they are relevant to the decision under consideration. 38 Those Guidelines contain the Department’s interpretation of the Act, and set out examples of circumstances which may or may not fall within the protection visa criteria in s.36(2)(a) and (aa). The Direction also requires decision-makers to take account of certain country information assessments prepared by the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, where relevant.

The Direction states that it is undesirable for first instance and review decision-makers to take inconsistent approaches to the decision making task where there is no rational basis for these inconsistencies. It goes on to say that, accordingly, it is desirable that subject to the Migration Act and Regulations and other applicable laws, decision-makers take as a starting point a common set of guidelines and country information.

Where relevant to the decision under consideration, the Tribunal must ‘take account’ of the Guidelines. The Full Federal Court has commented that it is highly desirable, if not essential, that a decision-maker’s reasons clearly expose consideration of Ministerial directions to demonstrate that the Guidelines have been taken into account. Merely adhering to the statutory scheme does not, of itself, establish that there has been compliance with the Direction, which ensures an additional safeguard to those claiming protection. 39

However, as the Minister cannot make a direction under s.499 that is inconsistent with the Act or the Regulations, the Direction does not require the Tribunal to take account of any aspects of the Guidelines which are inconsistent with the Act and its interpretation by the Australian courts. 40

38 Ministerial Direction No.56 was made under s.499 of the Act on 21 June 2013 and has effect from 22 June 2013. These Guidelines have since been renamed ‘Policy: Refugee and humanitarian – Complementary Protection Guidelines’, however, it would appear that the guidelines as renamed would continue to apply under Direction No.56.

39 BQL15 v MIBP [2018] FCAFC 104 (Collier, Flick and Perry JJ, 3 July 2018) at [19] (application for special leave to appeal dismissed: BQL15 v MIBP [2018] HCASL 363 (Gageler and Keane JJ, 14 November 2018)). These comments suggest a more thorough consideration is required than that suggested by the Court at first instance: BQL15 v MIBP [2017] FCCA 1976 (Judge Manousaridis, 18 August 2017). In that judgment, the Court held that the Complementary Protection Guidelines contain opinions about the law relating to complementary protection, and the duty to take them into account is not a duty to treat them as a fundamental element in the making of a decision, but rather a duty for the decision-maker to acquaint himself or herself with them for the purpose of informing himself or herself of the law to apply in the context of considering complementary protection claims: at [23]-[31]. Judge Manousaridis also made obiter comments that jurisdictional error would rarely arise for failure to take into account the Guidelines (at [34]), however in light of the Full Federal Court’s comments, this view should be treated with caution.

It is for the Tribunal to determine whether the Guidelines or country information are relevant to the decision, and if a decision does not expressly refer to the Guidelines or country information, a court might infer that the Tribunal did not consider them to be relevant.\footnote{SZTMD v MIBP [2015] FCA 150 (Perram J, 4 March 2015) at [20]. In that case, the Tribunal’s reasons were silent as to its consideration of the Guidelines or country information, and the Court held it was open to infer that it did not think that information was material to its task, following MIMA v Yusuf (2001) 206 CLR 323 [15]-[18]. In SZUWX v MIBP [2015] FCCA 2151 (Judge Driver, 10 August 2015) at [22]-[23], the Court found that it was not necessarily apparent that the Tribunal erred by failing to discuss the detail of the Guidelines in circumstances where the Tribunal was clearly aware of the Guidelines, having referred to them in the introductory portion of its reasons, and it was unclear what specific guidance the Guidelines might have provided (upheld on appeal, but this aspect of the reasoning was not expressly considered: SZUWX v MIBP [2015] FCA 1389 (Griffiths J, 4 December 2015). In SZTPD v MIBP [2015] FCCA 3109 (Judge Nicholls, 23 November 2015) at [52], the Court found that the Tribunal was not required to have regard to particular extracts from the Guidelines because those extracts were not relevant to the claims made.} However, a court won’t always draw such an inference (depending e.g. on the manner in which the reasons are drawn, the context and whether there is material that detracts from or displaces the inference), and in some circumstances a failure to expressly engage with the Guidelines may lead to error.\footnote{SZTMD v MIBP [2015] FCA 150 (Perram J, 4 March 2015) at [19]. See SZUQZ v MIBP [2015] FCCA 1552 (Judge Driver, 26 June 2015) and ARS15 v MIBP [2015] FCCA 2135 (Judge Street, 7 August 2015) as examples of judgments where the Tribunal has been found to have erred by failing to consider the relevance of the Guidelines.} A court might also infer from language used in the decision that the Tribunal has in fact had regard to the Guidelines.\footnote{See SZTCU v MIBP [2014] FCCA 1600 (Judge Cameron, 28 July 2014) at [42] and BQL15 v MIBP [2018] FCAFC 104 (Collier, Flick and Perry JJ, 3 July 2018) at [16]-[17] (application for special leave to appeal dismissed: BQL15 v MIBP [2018] HCASL 363 (Gageler and Keane JJ, 14 November 2018)). See also AJW15 v MIBP [2015] FCCA 2579 (Judge Street, 17 September 2015) where the Court found that the Tribunal had considered the Guidelines by its reference to Direction No.56 and findings on matters discussed in the Guidelines: at [3]-[5]. On appeal, the Federal Court held that the Tribunal’s statement that it was required to take into account the Guidelines should in itself be sufficient to conclude that the Tribunal had done so: AJW15 v MIBP [2016] FCA 197 (Barker J, 3 March 2016) at [46].}